

A Conservative View

Position Paper V: How about Racism & Slavery?

Brad Fregger

America is one of the least racist nations on Earth. Those that believe and/or state the opposite are either fools or traitors. I make this statement categorically because we cannot give succor to those who believe that the United States is a racist country and/or that White people are systemically racist.

This bald-faced lie was designed specifically to divide the United States into racial groups because a divided nation is easier to conquer.

Nikita Khrushchev (11/18/1956). "We will take America without firing a shot. We do not have to invade the United States. We will bury you from within."

Through the creation of a racist message throughout our media and educational system, he knew it would happen. He also knew he had plenty of help: thousands of educators, media people, and politicians who use the power of racism to divide the country and convince students as well as the ignorant and uninformed that socialism (the precursor to communism) is the only solution.

I was raised in Northern California, specifically the San Francisco Bay Area. There was very little racism there. One of my early crushes was a very pretty Mexican girl in my eighth grade class; the idea that she was of a different race never entered my mind.

The most important person (mentor) in my career life was Ken Coleman. He was a phenomenal executive and boss with an extraordinary career. I never thought of Ken as black, only as the best boss I've ever had.

I remember a personal conversation after work at a cocktail lounge when Ken said, "You know what worries me most, Brad?"

"I wasn't sure that anything actually worried you," I replied.

"I'm worried about my daughters. You know in their entire lives they've never experienced racism. What if, on a trip they end up in a place where they are not welcome, how will they be able to handle it?"

It was 1984 and his daughters, half-Black and half-Asian high school students had never experienced racism. That's my experience of Northern California in the 1980s. It didn't get worse from there; in fact, by the early 2000s the vast majority of the country was much the same.

However, this didn't sit well with the democrats, racial issues had always been their best weapon. If you disagreed with one of their ridiculous beliefs, you were automatically branded a racist (or, possibly, a misogynist or xenophobe). Many were afraid to challenge them; being branded a racist was the worst thing they could imagine.

To the democrats Barack Obama was perfect as the first Black president. He looked and spoke like the perfect candidate and he was a liberal with a strong tendency to support the soft revolution they were planning. "[The Bill of Rights is] a charter of negative liberties. It says what the states can't do to you. Says what the federal government can't do to you, but doesn't say what the federal government or state government must do on your behalf."

However, to much of the country it was the best opportunity to rid the nation of the specter of racism. Many thought, If we elect a Black president, nobody will ever be able to call us a racist nation again.

That hope was never realized. In fact, the accusation that we were a racist country was enhanced during the Obama presidency, and Barack and Michelle made sure to keep this lie alive. Remember, this was one of the most important tools in the democrat toolbox and they weren't about to let it go.

It was critical that the Marxists forces divide the nation on race and they used organizations like BLM and antifa to enhance the lie. As well as events like Trayvon Martin ("If I had a son, he'd look like Trayvon Martin") and Michael Brown ("Hands up, don't shoot") to spike the punch. The fact that neither situation had a damn thing to do with racism didn't make any difference. "Perception is reality."

This trend was exacerbated during the Trump presidency when the left, especially the progressive globalists, panicked as they saw their dreams of a global government disappearing with the "Make America Great Again" movement.

Racism was their best choice. It was critical that the nation, at least the children and the majority of the uninformed, be shown that America was an evil, racist country and that a new, "fairer" order was necessary.

It wasn't all that difficult because a great many teachers at the secondary and university levels had already been teaching the evils of capitalism and the blessings of socialism. All they needed to do was add in the lie that systemic racism was at the heart of the problem.

They had their examples with Michael Brown, Trayvon Martin, and the plight of the American urban Black. Then, the cherry was put on the cake when George Floyd died during a police engagement ("I can't breathe, I can't breathe"), in front of many witnesses and videotaped for the world to see. This was the defining moment for the BLM movement.

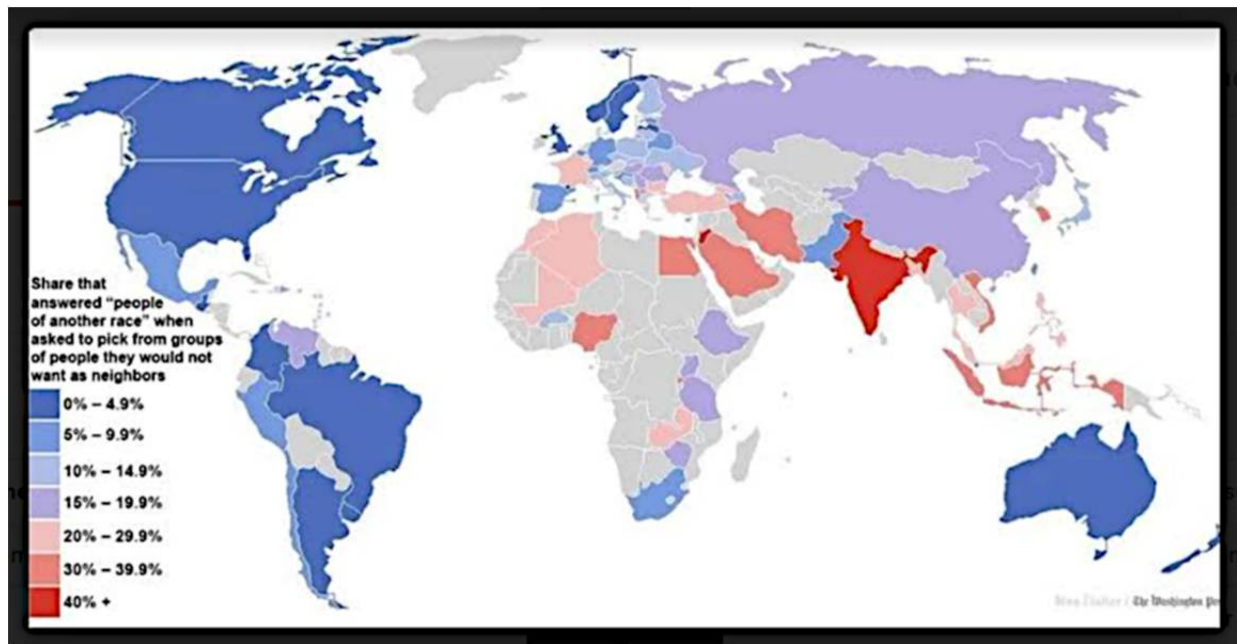

Next came the 1620 project and Critical Race Theory (CRT), both created by progressive Marxists globalists, to prove the depth of America's racism and both "big lies" following Joseph Goebbels' pronouncement, "If you tell a lie big enough and keep repeating it, people will eventually come to believe it."

Completely ignored were the facts that Caucasian countries were the first in the civilized world to outlaw racism (first Britain, then France, then in 1863 the United States), the 300,000 patriots (the vast majority White) who gave their lives to end slavery in the United States, and the phenomenal advances we've made nationally since the 1960s.

"I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin, but by the content of their character." Martin Luther King Jr.

This is truth for the vast majority of Americans who ignore a person's color and focus on their character.

According to the 2013 study of worldwide racial intolerance, Americans, overall, are much more tolerant than the citizens of most other places in the world. Below is a map of worldwide racial intolerance developed from World Values Survey's survey of the populations of 80 Countries.

Racial intolerance by country:
"Would you like someone of a different race as a neighbor?"

As you can clearly see, the United States is among one of the least racist nations on Earth.

The lies about slavery and racism in America are still impacting a lot of people who then become susceptible to the demand that America embrace socialism.

We must end the 1620 project that tries to convince our children and the uninformed that slavery began with America. That moment did not define America, it only created in America what already existed in the rest of the world. Slavery has been a part of civilization since the beginning of modern history. And, sad to say, it is still very much alive in much of the world today.

I trust you can now see that racism is not a problem in our country. This belief is a fraud perpetrated by the democrats, progressives, and others to be used as a weapon against their enemies. The nefarious objective of the CRT movement must not be allowed to succeed. Our children must learn, instead, that America is a country where people are judged by their character and not the color of their skin.

In fact, progressives, democrats, and “guilty, White liberals” are the true racists in America today. The progressives and the democrats are using race as a weapon with no regard for Blacks, especially in our inner cities, much like the early plantation owners.

Guilty, White liberals are a group that clearly represents racism. Racism is defined as believing that your race is superior to another race. That is exactly the attitude of the guilty, White liberal, “Blacks are incapable of solving their problems, it is up to us (superior White people) to step in and provide the rules, regulations, and laws that will make it easier for them.”

As a true conservative and member of the Fairfield City Council, I will do all in my power to stop the evil lies of racism, CRT, and slavery from having an impact in our city. We are open to all people of character, we are not now nor ever have been, a racist community. And, if I have anything to say about it, we never will be.

Thank you,
Brad Fregger
